Gone but Not Forgotten: Jazz Greats We've Lost This Year

Several legendary music greats have passed recently, and so have created space to reflect on and experience the impact their music continues to have on the new and the established jazz listener.

Wayne Shorter- a force of nature spanning over 4 decades, his music is wide ranging and world changing. From the new listener to the diehard fan, his music touches on so many influences.

Ahmad Jamal- considered a pioneer during the time of be-bop , Jamal's distinct style makes space for a whole new era.

Jaimie Branch- gone way too soon, so many people did not have the pleasure to know and hear Jaimie. We will listen to the music and hear from many peers to keep their memory alive.

Joey DeFrancesco- a true triple threat, his energy and charisma was widely know and deeply felt. We will touch on his influences and his long lasting legacy.
